POLITICIANS SEE HARMONY PROSPECT

Factional Silence Over Sproul and Scott Booms Awakens Hope of Agreement

CROW AS PEACE MAKER

State Chairman, With Other Leaders, Striving to Bring Separated Chiefs Together

The old saying that silence gives consent, politicians are beginning to think is applicable to the political situation in Pennsylvania as far as harmony in Republican ranks is concerned.

A month ago State Senator William C. Sproul, of Delaware County, a Penn. follower, announced at a dinner to Mayor Babcock, in Pittsburgh, that he was a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor. This was followed a week ago by the announcement of the candidacy of John R. K. Scott, of this city, Congressman-at-Large, a Vares right-hand man, for the Lieutenant Governorship.

The Vares have winked at the candidacy of Senator Sproul for the gubernatorial honor and have virtually said by their attitude and silence that they have no quarrel to pick with Sproul so long as their power in the State, through leadership in Philadelphia, is recognized. Senator Penrose, who stormed and paved the earth at the Pittsburgh dinner and declared that the Vares had a poor chance for a look-in on the State ticket, has kept what politicians declare to be a "discreet silence" since Congressman Scott announced the gubernatorial run and was staunchly and openly supported by Senator E. H. Vares.

At any rate neither of the Philadelphia factions has shown an inclination to challenge the other or to bridge the chasm. In the meantime State Senator William E. Crow, the Republican State chairman, is playing the role of the harmonizer with might and main, supported by scores of up-State leaders, who come from the land where Philadelphia differences are looked upon, according to Crow and other leaders, as a brand of selfish politics.

In view of the silence of both the Vares and the Penrose sides of the Philadelphia situation it is thought Sproul will be accepted by the Vares and Scott by the Penrose forces. The third place on the row office schedule, that of secretary of internal affairs, is looked upon as being very much more in the dark than the two leading positions. A few days ago it seemed that the chairman of the appropriations committee, James F. Woodward, of McKeesport, Allegheny County, would surely be the choice for the third position if the Sproul-Scott ticket went through on harmony runners, but the situation has changed considerably. Paul Butick, the incumbent, is now looked upon as a more likely choice, but he is considered as a Vares man, so there is likelihood that some candidate not yet mentioned will be selected.

CONGRESSMEN-AT-LARGE

The question of Congressmen-at-large is being discussed with much interest in all parts of the State. It depends almost entirely upon the character of the men selected for these three positions on the State ticket. Congressman Thomas Spencer Crago, of Waynesboro, and Congressman Mahlon M. Garland, of Pittsburgh, are looked upon as almost certain to be renominated and re-elected to their present seats. Crago was in the Sixty-second, Sixty-fourth and Sixty-fifth Congresses. He has a military record and has proved popular and is apparently favored by the leaders. Garland is particularly strong, being a labor candidate because of his leadership in the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. This situation apparently disposes of two seats.

O'NEIL AND SPROUL TO OPEN OFFICES HERE

Republican Candidates for Governor Preparing for Primary Campaign

General plans are being made for the opening of the campaign leading up to the primaries next spring. State Senator Sproul and Highway Commissioner J. Denny O'Neil, the two announced candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, are both making arrangements to open offices in this city.

Mr. Weeks, who for years has been president of the Keystone Automobile Club, of this city, and a resident of Rutledge, Delaware County, said the advertisement was aimed at "Judge" C. Scott Richards, secretary and treasurer of the Magistrates and Constables' Association of Philadelphia, Delaware, Montgomery and Chester Counties, who has an office in the Transportation Building, 26 South Fifteenth street.

The directors of the Keystone Automobile Club, Mr. Weeks said today, would ask District Attorney Rotan to investigate Richards' latest "literary" project. The proposition that Mr. Weeks believed should be investigated by Mr. Rotan in the 1918 issue of the "Minor Judiciary of Pennsylvania."

Mr. Weeks charged that Richards, through his agents, in soliciting advertisements for the book, was promising immunity to automobile speeders. Sometimes these agents, according to Mr. Weeks, promise prospective advertisers "merciful sentences."

To all of Mr. Weeks' charges Richards made emphatic denials.

Mr. Weeks said that a committee was investigating the "Judge's" business methods. This committee, he said, has been instructed to warn merchants and others to ignore the Richards advertising solicitors.

"We have received complaints that Mr. Richards is again busy getting out another edition of his annual booklet, which gives a definition of the automobile laws of this State. The solicitors, we have been told, informed persons that the money would be used in starting a campaign to have a bill passed in the next Legislature creating salaries for constables. Richards poses as a friend of powerful politicians. After all our complaints have been received we will place the matter before District Attorney Rotan."

Richards was busy in his office. When not busy receiving telephone messages delegations of men would be dropping in. Once the telephone rang, and after removing the receiver the "Judge" said:

"Don't worry, old top, I have ordered three tons of coal for you. Yes, I left the coal for you. Yes, I left the order for you—sure at—"

"Judge" Richards led the reporter into an anteroom. He said he was ready to be interrogated. During the conversation mentioned that he was operating a hotel for "rest cures" in Cumberland County, was interested in slaughtering hogs in Pennsylvania, was delivering coal to cold homes in his limousine, was a commercial lawyer, a collector of old debts, a publisher of several Philadelphia newspapers, etc.

"It is untrue that I am telling prospective advertisers that they will receive lenient sentences if they advertise in the 1918 issue of the Minor Judiciary of Pennsylvania," said Richards.

"You see, old top, we get out this book every year. It is a wonderful book; it explains the law to the magistrates and to the constables."

"Do you consider yourself qualified to explain the law to magistrates and constables?"

"Yes, I do," replied Richards; "I studied law, but never received my diploma—but I know legal matters as well as any lawyer," replied Richards.

"All this fuss has been started by this man Weeks. He is getting to be a regular bogey-book. When I was his law teacher he treated me to the queen's taste but we had a falling out. I fear no one. I'll go ahead with my book and clear up all the money I can, but a part of it will be used in campaign work in behalf of the poor struggling constables. I want a bill introduced to have constables placed on a salary basis."

"I welcome Mr. Rotan to investigate my character. He knows my character. The more I am roasted the more popular I become. There is no truth in the charges made by Mr. Weeks."

In 1915, Richards organized a "river picnic." The affair was staged on a river steamer. Before the affair was held Superintendent of Police Robinson received many complaints from prominent men, among them Congressman J.

Hampton Moore. The complaints were that Richards through his agents was seeking contributions under the pretense that the money would be used in aiding the police pension fund and that, in return, Richards promised the contributors favorable publicity in one of his "newspapers." Superintendent Robinson censured Richards at that time.

Then again on April 3, 1916, the Philadelphia Board of Magistrates, at a meeting held in City Hall, denounced Richards. A resolution was adopted repudiating all connection between the Philadelphia Board of Magistrates with the so-called Magistrates and Constables' Association of Philadelphia, Delaware, Montgomery and Chester Counties.

Several years ago Richards was arrested and entered bail in Delaware County on charges that he had withheld money collected as automobile fines. Later the charges were dropped. A dinner under the auspices of the association, of which he is secretary, was ordered to be canceled by District Attorney Rotan.

"JUDGE" RICKARDS DENIES NEW CHARGE

Secretary of Magistrates and Constables' Association Is Not Afraid of Inquiry

AN "AD" CAUSES FUSS

President of Motor Club Put "Piece in Paper," and Here's the Result

NOTICE
 Motorists and others who have been solicited for contributions, donations, advertisements, etc., purporting to be for the benefit of Justices of the Peace, Magistrates, Aldermen, or those who have made such contributions or given advertisements, are requested to communicate with Keystone Automobile Club,
 J. H. Weeks, President,
 923 Sansom street, Phila.

J. H. Weeks, president of the Keystone Automobile Club, was asked to explain this advertisement, which appeared in the Philadelphia newspapers. Mr. Weeks admitted he was the author of the advertisement.

Mr. Weeks, who for years has been president of the Keystone Automobile Club, of this city, and a resident of Rutledge, Delaware County, said the advertisement was aimed at "Judge" C. Scott Richards, secretary and treasurer of the Magistrates and Constables' Association of Philadelphia, Delaware, Montgomery and Chester Counties, who has an office in the Transportation Building, 26 South Fifteenth street.

The directors of the Keystone Automobile Club, Mr. Weeks said today, would ask District Attorney Rotan to investigate Richards' latest "literary" project. The proposition that Mr. Weeks
